

♥ I'm in love with learning ♥

for a lifetime...

ADULT LITERACY WEEK

FEB 14 - 20, 2010

Never Underestimate Someone

By Breeanna Howsden
Northland Pioneer College

Now, I know you probably expect me to be blunt about the topic, "Why I Love Learning." Well, I'm not. I'm going to put a twist to it. I'll make you think about it in a way you wouldn't expect.

I'll start by telling you a little about myself. I was born premature. I only weighed 1 lb. 9 oz. I also died four times. Many of my doctors thought I wouldn't be able to ever walk or talk. But I'm walking, talking, and learning just fine.

The reason why I love learning is because people thought I'd never be able to do it. They thought I'd just be a vegetable my whole life. So, it's kind of like a laughing right towards people. Don't get me wrong, I do love learning. I take advantage of learning every chance I get. My favorite subject is writing. The doctors said I'd never learn how to talk. I did. They said I'd never learn how to walk. I did. They even said that I'd be wearing diapers the rest of my life. Well, I'm not.

I will admit that I've had to learn things in my own way like how to tie my shoes and simple stuff like that. But isn't it still all just learning nonetheless? I guess what I'm just trying to say is the reason why I love learning is because I almost didn't get to.

Never underestimate someone. They might just surprise you. I'm living proof.

Award of Excellence – 2010 Adult Literacy Week Contest